No. 08-5695FDB/JRC

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

NOTED FOR:
May 29, 2009

18 This 42 U.S.C. § 1983 Civil Rights action has been referred to the undersigned 19 Magistrate Judge pursuant to Title 28 U.S.C. §§ 636(b)(1)(A) and 636(b)(1)(B) and Local 20 Magistrate Judges' Rules MJR 1, MJR 3, and MJR 4. Plaintiff is proceeding in forma pauperis
21 (Dkt. # 4).
22

23 FACTS

24 Plaintiff is a Washington State inmate. Plaintiff names the Secretary of the State of 25 Washington Department of Corrections as the sole defendant in this action. Plaintiff alleges that 26 in June of 2006 Plaintiff was notified by prison personnel that he was being moved to McNeil

1 Island and that he had ninety days to ship his property or it would be donated or destroyed (Dkt.
2 # 5, affidavit of Entler page 1 paragraph 1). Plaintiff alleges he applied for access to his prison 3 mandatory savings to ship the material, but his application was eventually denied by prison 4 officials – not Defendant Vail. Mr. Vail’s predecessor, Harold Clarke, was Secretary of the 5 Department of Corrections at the time this alleged incident occurred. (Dkt. # 5, affidavit of Entler 6 page 2 paragraph 6). Plaintiff filed an action in Thurston County Superior Court for a review of 7 the State’s decision not to allow him to access his mandatory prison savings. Mr. Entler also 8 asked the Superior Court to serve his petition for review by mail. Thurston County Superior 9 Court Judge Paula Casey, who is not named as a defendant, denied the motion to serve the 10 petition by mail, but also entered an ex-parte restraining order that temporarily prevented 11 destruction of the property at issue (Dkt. # 5, affidavit of Entler page 2 paragraphs 8 and 9).

13 In January of 2007, plaintiff again sought to have the petition served by mail. Thurston 14 County Superior Court Judge Gary Tabor, who similarly is not a named defendant in this action, 15 denied that motion (Dkt. # 5, affidavit of Entler page 3 paragraph 11). According to plaintiff the 16 case was later dismissed for lack of service. Plaintiff brings this action claiming denial of access 17 to courts because the Department of Corrections does not provide service of process for 18 incarcerated persons.
19

20 Plaintiff also alleges that on January of 2007, he was scheduled for a 9:00 a.m. telephonic 21 hearing with the Thurston County Superior Court. Plaintiff asked his work supervisor in the 22 state penitentiary for the day off. Plaintiff normally worked from 4:00 a.m. until 10:00 a.m.
23 Plaintiff had directed his request to the wrong person. Apparently, Plaintiff had not properly 24 sought nor received permission from custody staff, who are responsible for making these 25 decisions. The day before the telephonic hearing, plaintiff allegedly informed two Correctional 26

1 Officers that he would not be going to work the next day. At 10:00 p.m. the Correctional 2 Officers allegedly informed him that he would be infraacted if he did not go to work.

3 Despite this warning, Plaintiff did not go to work and he was given a major infraction
4 (Dkt. # 5, affidavit of Entler page 4 paragraph 4). The telephonic hearing lasted 3 minutes --
5 from 9:00 a.m. until 9:03 a.m. Apparently, the Superior Court had decided a hearing was not 6 needed. At the subsequent major infraction hearing, Plaintiff explained the steps he had taken to 7 attend the hearing and the hearing officer reduced the major infraction to a minor infraction, 8 “unexcused absence from work.” Plaintiff was given five days cell confinement for not going 9 through proper procedures (Dkt. # 5, affidavit of Entler page 5 paragraph 7).

11 Plaintiff attempted to file an action in Pierce County Superior Court challenging the 12 minor infraction as arbitrary and capricious (Dkt. # 5, affidavit of Entler page 1 paragraph 1).
13 Mr. Entler does not state what the disposition of this case is, but he makes the conclusory 14 statement that he is unable to pursue his claims because DOC does not provide “services and 15 supplies to serve DOC with personal service necessary to pursue my valid claims.” (Dkt # 5, 16 affidavit of Entler page 6 paragraph 13). Mr. Entler again sues the Secretary of the Department 17 of Corrections for denial of access to courts.

19 Having reviewed the complaint, the motion to dismiss, the response, the reply, and the 20 surreply, the court recommends that the current complaint be dismissed. The court is aware that 21 Plaintiff has asked for leave to amend or voluntarily dismiss the complaint, (Dkt. # 12, page 20), 22 but the proposed amendment will not cure the defect in the original complaint. The Department 23 of Corrections has no duty under the United States Constitution to provide service of process for 24 inmates. This court recommends dismissal. The dismissal would be for failure to state a claim 25 and would count as a strike pursuant to 28 U.S.C. 1915 (g).

The Supreme Court in Bell espouses that to apply the language from the earlier Gibson case literally eviscerates the possibility of a Rule 12 dismissal. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12 motions to dismiss may be based either on the lack of a cognizable legal theory or on the absence of sufficient facts alleged under a cognizable legal theory. Balistreri v. Pacifica Police Department, 901 F.2d 696, 699 (9th Cir. 1990). Material allegations are taken as admitted and the complaint is construed in the plaintiff's favor. Keniston v. Roberts, 717 F.2d 1295 (9th Cir. 1983). “While a complaint attacked by a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss does not need detailed factual allegations, a plaintiff's obligation to provide the grounds of his entitlement to relief requires more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do.” Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 1964-65 (2007)(internal citations omitted). “Factual allegations must be enough to raise a right to relief above the speculative level, on the assumption that all the allegations in the complaint are true

1 (even if doubtful in fact).” Id. at 1965. Plaintiffs must allege “enough facts to state a claim to 2 relief that is plausible on its face.” Id. at 1974.

3 DISCUSSION

4 1. Access to courts.

5 Plaintiff argues the Department of Corrections is obligated to provide service of process
6 services so he can pursue his claims in state court. Plaintiff is attempting to file actions in state 7 court challenging conditions of confinement. These actions are not filed as Personal Restraint
8 Petitions under Washington’s Rules of Appellate Procedure. When a Personal Restraint Petition 9 is filed with the state court the court serves the petition and directs the respondent to file an 10 answer. See Wash. R.A.P.16.8 (c) Instead, plaintiff in his state actions is attempting to impose 11 personal liability on the named defendants.
12

13 It is well settled that the duty of the state to provide access to courts does not extend 14 beyond the pleading stage. Cornett v. Donovan, 51 F.3d 894 (9th Cir. 1995). The court in 15 Cornett stated:
16

17 The Supreme Court cases discussing the constitutional right of 18 access indicate that a state need provide assistance through the 19 pleading stage. The right of access is designed to ensure that a 20 habeas corpus petition or a civil rights complaint of a person in 21 state custody will reach a court for consideration. Thereafter, the 22 court has discretion to request that counsel represent indigent 23 persons when the circumstances so warrant.

24 Cornett, 51 F.3d. at 896. Both of plaintiff’s complaints reached the state courts. In Cornett the 25 court addressed appointment of counsel and whether the right of access to courts required a state 26 to provide legal assistance beyond the pleading stage. Once a pleading reaches a court, the court has discretion. This discretion includes the decision whether or not to order service of a summons and complaint on the defendants at court or government expense.

1 The right of access to courts is limited and does not guarantee a right to file any type of 2 action in any forum. The tools required by the constitution are those needed to file an action
3 attacking a sentence or conviction, or an action challenging conditions of confinement. Plaintiff
4 in this case filed actions and he picked a state court forum. The state court has the discretion 5 whether to order service at court expense or whether to require the plaintiff to pay for a process 6 server. The state court exercised its discretion in not agreeing to provide service of process, and 7 the exercise of that discretion cannot form the basis for a complaint in federal court.

9 In federal court, when a person is granted in forma pauperis status, the court attempts 10 service by mail utilizing the United States Marshals Service or clerk office personnel.

11 The Tenth Circuit has stated that the right of access to court is limited to “completion of 12 the complaint for a federal habeas or civil rights action.” Nordgren v. Milliken, 762 F.2d 851 13 (10th Cir. 1985). This would imply that there is no obligation to allow state actions except as 14 they relate to exhaustion of state issues for the purpose of habeas corpus.
15

16 This action fails to state a claim as plaintiff’s complaints reached the state court and the 17 complaints were considered. That tribunal exercised its discretion and did not order service at 18 court expense. Of course, plaintiff had the option to pay for a process server or have the 19 complaints and summons served by a person who was not a party to the actions. Plaintiff also 20 had the option to bring his actions in Federal Court, but choose not to do so. For these reasons, 21 this action fails to state a claim and should be dismissed pursuant to Rule 12 (b)(6)
22

23 2. Frivolous actions.

24 Defendant argues in the reply that the underlying state court actions were frivolous and 25 therefore access to courts is not an issue because the right of access to courts does not encompass 26 frivolous filings. The first state action was an alleged due process violation. Plaintiff allegedly

1 had funds to pay for shipping of his property in his mandatory savings account, but the 2 Department of Corrections would not allow him access to those funds for that purpose. The court 3 cannot state as a matter of law that this claim was frivolous.

4 The second state action dealt with a minor infraction where plaintiff was given 5 days 5 cell confinement (Dkt. # 5). In the prison disciplinary system, the right to due process applies to 6 protect a liberty interest Wolff v. McDonnell, 418 U.S. 539 (1974). A prisoner has no federal 7 or state protected liberty interest in due process when the sanction imposed as a result of a 8 disciplinary proceeding neither extends the length of the sentence nor is atypical and significant 9 in relation to the ordinary incidents of prison life. See Sandin v. Conner, 515 U.S. 472 (1995).
10 A complaint is frivolous when it has no arguable basis in law or fact. Franklin v. Murphy, 745 11 F.2d 1221, 1228 (9th Cir. 1984). In this case, although plaintiff's claim is without merit, it does 12 not rise to the level of being frivolous.
13

15 3. Surreply.

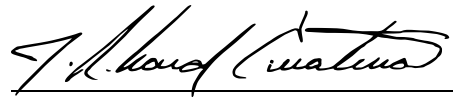

16 The motion to strike the reply brief should be denied because defendant was responding 17 to issues raised by plaintiff in his response to the motion.

18 CONCLUSION

19 This court recommends that the motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim should be 20 GRANTED. Plaintiff should not be given leave to amend because the defect in the complaint 21 cannot be cured by amendment. Plaintiff's motion to strike the reply brief should be DENIED, 22 but defendants should provide Mr. Entler with a new copy of page five of the reply brief, as this 23 page was apparently missing from the copy provided to plaintiff (Dkt # 13). This dismissal 24 should count as a strike pursuant to 28 U.S.C. 1915(g) because it is recommended that the 25 complaint be dismissed for failure to state a claim.
26

1 Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1) and Rule 72(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil 2 Procedure, the parties shall have ten (10) days from service of this Report to file written 3 objections. See also, Fed. R. Civ. P. 6. Failure to file objections will result in a waiver of those 4 objections for purposes of appeal. Thomas v. Arn, 474 U.S. 140 (1985). Accommodating the 5 time limit imposed by Rule 72(b), the clerk is directed to set the matter for consideration on May 6 29, 2009, as noted in the caption.
